CUSTOM APPLICATION

The Chicago Transit Authority (CTA) introduced its first electronic pay-as-you-go fare card in late 2002. Several months after initiating this system, the CTA began the search for an alternate, Web-based method of account management, in an attempt to give commuters an easier way to manage their public transportation expenses.

To create this sophisticated system, the CTA paired up with experienced Web developer, Americaneagle.com. As a result of this partnership, CTA commuters can now log into a convenient online portal to manage their fare cards and view transaction history, reports, etc. What's more, this recurring billing system securely handles millions of transactions per year.
